

My Daddy's A Sailor

By: Edmund L. Zukowski

Dedicated to all the Daddy's that serve proudly in the United States Navy

My Daddy is a sailor in the Navy.
He serves our country proudly.

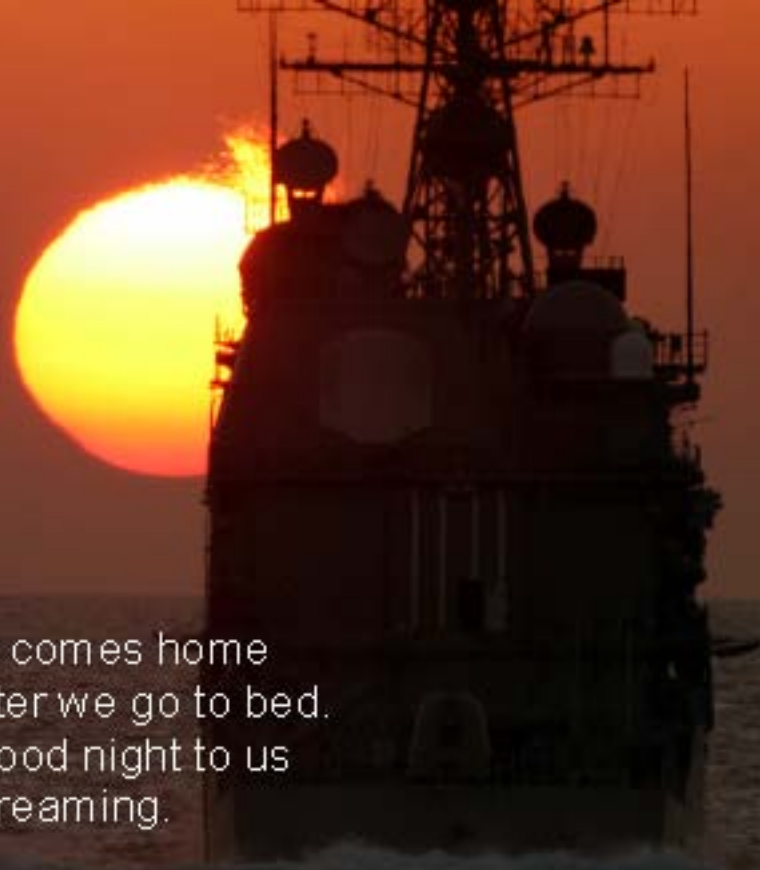

He wears different clothes to work than other Daddy's do. They are called uniforms.

Sometimes Daddy wakes up early in the morning and goes to work before the sun rises.

Sometimes he comes home
late at night after we go to bed.
He whispers good night to us
while we are dreaming.

Daddy's job is important. He keeps our world safe and protects many people.

Sometimes Daddy's job sends him away for a long time. This is when we miss him the most.

It is hard not having him around.
We think of him every day.

When he gets a chance he sends us letters and e-mails. We send him pictures and drawings.

Daddy says that you miss someone because you love them very much.
We love Daddy a lot.

He loves us too. We are counting the days until he returns home

Soon we will go to the base to watch
Daddy come home. We will get all dressed up.

The first thing we are going to do when we see him is give him a big hug. We are glad he is home.

Daddy's job is not like other Daddy's jobs and that is okay with me.
